Problem Statement: A lot of the time university students tend to focus less on their mental health and more on their studies. This app provides a way for students to log their mental daily, getting reminder notifications every night to type a brief paragraph about their day, how they felt, and what they accomplished.

Who statement: This problem affects college and university students around the world, especially those with preexisting mental health issues.

What statement: University students are not contributing enough time to maintaining their mental health.

Where statement: Where the problem presents itself is on the campuses of universities and colleges everywhere in the world.

Why statement: It is common to feel overwhelmed in college, but having strong mental health will help you manage stress, your decision-making process, and your social interactions with others.
